OVERVIEW

According to the Malaysian Anti-Corruption Commission (MACC) complaints bureau, most bribery and corruption complaints from 2013 to 2018 had been allegations involving the procurement sector. It is a high risk sector which requires heightened control measures and monitoring mechanism to ensure staff/person associated from either end do not condone to such fraudulent conduct.

The program sheds light on common schemes perpetrated throughout the procurement lifecycle. It takes participants through the entire procurement process and initiates the discussion on prevention, detection and response mechanisms that can be implemented at an organizational level.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Identify fraud, bribery and corruption schemes;
- Detect red flags which may indicate presence of procurement fraud;
- Apply a risk-based approach to implement and continuously improve internal controls and monitoring mechanisms;
- Apply basic investigative and statistical techniques to detect and monitor the procurement activity.
